Taking the Pulse of the Nation

Gallup is regarded as the premiere polling and survey organization that has tracked political and economic trends for decades. What is often not well known is that Gallup also carries out a wide variety of projects for governments and corporations that need to have a sense of the moods and direction of our nation. The Gallup-Healthways Well Being Index was launched to track health and well-being in communities throughout the United States and is a landmark effort in a time of great uncertainty regarding the future of our health care system.

Katie Wreed Bell is Partner, Global Well-Being, for Gallup. She leads Gallup's well-being initiatives, including the Gallup-Healthways Well-Being Index. Gallup has committed to continuing this groundbreaking initiative which interviews more than 1,000 Americans every day, for the next 25 years. This transformational endeavor will create a database of health and well-being data that will provide government, business, and healthcare leaders with what is needed to measure the health, wellness, and prevention needs of the U.S. population.
