Philanthropy Boosts Business Bottom Line

What role does philanthropy play in a successful business? How does the non-profit sector impact our economy? And how does business benefit from supporting local non-profit organizations? Join N. Christian Anderson III for a look at the intersection of business and philanthropy as he shares his views about why getting involved adds to the bottom line of Orange County's businesses.

Chris Anderson was named editor of The Orange County Register in 1980 - at the astonishingly young age of 30 - and led the newspaper to its first two (1984 and 1989) of its three Pulitzer Prizes. He served as President of the board of trustees of South Coast Repertory; served on the executive committee of the KOCE-TV Foundation; and currently serves as a member of the board of trustees of St. Margaret's Episcopal School and on the board and executive committee of the Orange County Community Foundation.
