Preparing California's Future Workforce

The Role of the California State University System

The California State University, which spans the entire state of California, has an annual budget of more than $5 billion; but the CSU System faces challenges ahead, particularly as budget cuts and a push toward less reliance on state funds increase the costs to students. What is the impact to California and Orange County if a CSU degree is no longer affordable to our growing student population? As the public university that prepares the majority of California's workforce, these budget cuts would have a direct impact on the state's economy and on the key industries that CSU graduates enter – such as nursing, teaching, agriculture, business, public administration and technology. As the Chancellor of the California State University, Charles B. Reed is the chief executive officer of the country's largest senior system of public higher education. He provides leadership to 46,000 faculty and staff and 417,000 students on 23 campuses and seven off-campus centers.
